We are going to be reviewing the rise of visits to museums and galleries in England. In 2013 the British Museum had 2.6 mln visits, it increased by the years, in 2017 an astounding amount of visitors had visited the museum, 5.6 mln visitors! The national gallery had slightly more visitors in 2013 than the British museum, 2.7 mln visits were paid to the gallery back in 2013, but by the years, the British museum took the lead respectively, the gallery had 4.8 mln visitors. It seems like the population finds the British Museum more appealing. Let's compare the Tate gallery and the Science Museum. - the Tate Gallery and the Science Museum the Tate Gallery started off in 2013 with only 0.9 mln visitors, although, the speed of the increase rate of the gallery is astounding! It increased to 2.2 mln in only 4 years, looks like the gallery had something in store for us. Whilst, the Science Museum had 3.8 mln visitors in 2013 and loosened up to 1.6 mln in 2017.

I'd recommend to visit the British museum, because it has most of the history of England, than any other museum. Give the Science Museum a go, not letting it's decrease come into mind, because it's always an entertainment to look at what science has to offer. All in all, I think that visits don't matter as much, because the secrets of our past matter more.
