Museums and galleries are the most attractive places for tourists. Millions of people come from different countries to visit Britain's most famous museums and galleries. Last few years the attendance rate of some of them has increased, while others have become less attendant.

According to the data that has been collected for three separate years we can make some conclusions. The general amount of visitors in 2017 reached almost 16 million people, which means that people are getting more culturally educated.

Taking into consideration all the data I can make some comparisons. Firstly, natural and scientific museums have become less popular than they were four years ago. On the contrary, British Museum, National Gallery and Tate Gallery have become more attendant. Secondly, galleries are gaining more popularity than museums. Finally, general amount of visitors reached almost 16 million, while in 2013 there were only 13 million.

I want to give some recommendations to the museum directors, to increase the attendance of museums and galleries. To begin with, they should decrease the ticket price or make the entrance free because a lot of people can not afford to buy expensive tickets. Besides, they would better situate museums and galleries near the center of city.

Taking into consideration all I mentioned above I can make a conclusion: most museums and galleries are gaining more popularity every year. Nevertheless, the government should find ways to attract more tourists even more tourists.
